SWEEP DEMOCRATS INTO OFFICE IN KEYSTONE STATE

Guffey and Earle Triumph In Landslide Throughout The State

GET HOUSE CONTROL

First Accomplishment of Like Character Since Turn of The Century

By Harry Bergman
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(INS)—Shedding its time-worn cloak of Republicanism, Pennsylvania at last succumbed to the lure of the New Deal today.

In a stunning uprising against heavy tradition the nation's second largest state recorded a thumping triumph for President Roosevelt and the new Democratic dispensation by choosing Joseph T. Guffey, lusty champion of the National Administration, for the United States Senate, and George W. Earle, erstwhile American Minister to Austria, for the Governorship.

Returns this morning in the tabulation of ballots cast in yesterday's epoch-making election served only to emphasize the decisiveness of the electorate's verdict.

With little more than a thousand of the State's 7,556 polling districts still unaccounted for, Guffey was enjoying a lead of more than 75,000 votes over his Republican adversary, David Aiken Reed, the Commonwealth's incumbent senior Senator whose distaste for the New Deal never lacked blunt expression.

While not faring as well as his Senatorial running mate, Earle was steadily drawing away from his Republican foe, Attorney General William A. Schnader. The Democratic candidate's margin over Schnader approached 30,000 ballots.

In cold figures the story of the disaster which overtook the entrenched Republicans in yesterday's dramatic election can be crisply told in this fashion:

Of Pennsylvania's 7,556 precincts, 6797 give:

For Senator: Guffey, 1,311,245; Reed, 1,234,596.

For Governor: Earle, 1,293,979; Schnader, 1,264,963.

Latest returns trickling in from all regions of the State also made it appear this morning that Guffey and Earle were carrying their lesser running mates along with them on the road to victory.

Thomas A. Kennedy, International Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, enjoyed a lead of 39,850 ballots in his battle for the Lieutenant Governorship with the Republican nominee, State Senator Harry B. Scott. In 5627 precincts Kennedy had amassed an impressive total of 1,947,798 votes as against 1,616,948 for Scott.

The same number of precincts accorded Thomas A. Logue, the Democratic candidate for Secretary of Internal Affairs, a majority of 13,930 over his Republican opponent, H. Harvey Taylor, who also is chairman of the State G. O. P. Committee. Logue's aggregate of votes was 1,626,594, while 1,602,674 ballots were chalked up for Taylor.

A margin of 14,106 votes in 5627 precincts was held by Chester H. Rhodes, the Democratic candidate for the Superior Court Judge, over the Republican incumbent, Judge Frank M. Trexler. Rhodes has garnered 1,633,715 ballots, compared with 1,619,609 for the veteran Republican jurist.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—(INS)—On the crest of a New Deal juggernaut, Democrats apparently swept into numerical control of the State

WIN SENATE AND HOUSE

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 7.—Passing all records since the birth of the Republic, the Democratic party today apparently had won 70 seats in the Senate of the 74th Congress. The Democrats shattered all modern precedents by capturing a two-thirds majority in the Senate, the first held by either party since the Civil War when Southern Senators resigned their posts.

It appeared the new Senate would line up with 70 Democrats, 24 Republicans, one Farm-Laborite and one Progressive. This would give the Democrats a plurality of 44 votes on partisan issues and four votes more than a two-thirds majority, the whole giving the Democrats a net gain of 10 seats in yesterday's election. In the 34 Senatorial contests the Republicans captured but five seats. These were in California, where Senator Hiram W. Johnson also won the Democratic nomination; Delaware, Michigan, North Dakota and Vermont. They lost 11 seats in all, ten to the Democrats, and one when Young Bob LaFollette changed from Republican to a Progressive standard in Wisconsin.

Democratic gains were recorded apparently in Connecticut, Indiana, Maryland, Missouri, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio, Rhode Island, West Virginia and of all places, Pennsylvania. The Keystone State had chosen Joseph F. Guffey over Senator David A. Reed, electing the first Democratic Senator in history.

THREE GENERATIONS IN BUSINESS FIFTY YEARS

S. B. Ardrey & Sons Located At Same Site During Last Half Century

WAS FOUNDED IN 1884

A half century of business enterprise is being observed this year by S. B. Ardrey & Sons, machinists, whose plant on Pond street has occupied the same location for the entire 50-year period.

The business was founded in the year 1884 by the late Samuel B. Ardrey, who served his apprenticeship with Sir William Fairbairn, the great British metallurgist. Mr. Ardrey came to this country as a young man of 19, and was employed by the Delaware Iron Works in Jersey City, N. J., being under the guidance of Erickson, the great inventor of the boat "Monitor," while at the Jersey City plant. Later he returned to England, the place of his birth, where he spent a number of years inventing machinery for the manufacture of mule and ring spindles for the cotton and woolen industry. Mr. Ardrey had a number of British patents on these things.

For a short time after the elder Mr. Ardrey founded the business here his two elder sons, Thomas S. and William W. Ardrey, were associated with him in the business.

George Ardrey, the present owner of the business, son of Samuel B. Ardrey by a second marriage, served as shop boy for a time. After the death of S. B. Ardrey, in 1902, his two sons by the second marriage, George and Malpas, conducted the business for a number of years, it then being a co-partnership with their mother, Mrs. Selma Ardrey, also having interests in the business. This partnership continued until about 1917 when George Ardrey purchased his brother's interests. The mother of the two died a short time later, and the business has since been conducted by George Ardrey, with his son, S. Bradley Ardrey, becoming affiliated about seven years ago. Thus three generations of the family have been actively engaged in the business since 1884.

Although the business enterprise has always been operated at the same site, the original building, used years

NEGRO, PLEADING GUILTY TO CHARGE OF UNLAWFUL POSSESSION OF LIQUOR IS ORDERED TO REMAIN OUT OF DOYLESTOWN DURING 2-YEAR PAROLE PERIOD

Newark Resident, Who Stole Bearing From Railroad Freight Yards, Given Three Years In County Prison; John Carr, Bristol, Is Granted A Parole

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 7.—"You are not a desirable citizen to have in Bucks county," President Judge Hiram H. Keller said to Samuel White, Negro, when White pleaded guilty to a charge of unlawful possession of liquor at a session of miscellaneous court here.

White, a well known character around the stables at the Doylestown Fair grounds, has on numerous occasions been reported to police and others as an "undesirable character," and on Monday Judge Keller asked him why it was that Doylestown Fair officials have been wanting to get rid of him for more than a year. White made no reply.

Judge Keller suspended sentence on White because his wife and five children are in Bucks county on relief. The condition attached to the sentence was that White leave Doylestown immediately and remain out of town for at least two years, the duration of the parole placed on him.

"I'd like to see you get out of Bucks county for good, but because of the fact that you have a wife and children here whom you are not supporting, the Court has no jurisdiction to order you out of the county. The Court does not believe your story."

Constable A. R. Atkinson, Doylestown, testified that White was arrested by him as he was walking in the fair grounds with a quart bottle filled with "moonshine" whiskey, during fair week.

"The Court has been informed that you have been carrying liquor out to the fair grounds for some time and this must be stopped," Judge Keller added. "If you ever get back into court while your parole is in effect, you will be sentenced to the limit."

Floyd Flagler, Harrow, who was sentenced to serve 9 months to five years in the Bucks County Prison by Judge Keller, was granted a parole by Judge Keller and placed on probation, with Sheriff Horace E. Gwinner as the parole officer.

Flagler was sentenced on a charge of assault and battery with intent to ravish. He has served five months. Flagler's attorney pointed out, and Flagler himself said to the Court, that he had learned his lesson.

Judge Keller stated that the Court had received some reliable information to the effect that the woman involved in the case did not bear a good reputation and that the blame really should be divided between the two. The costs, amounting to $212.02, were directed to be paid.

FREY RENAMED TO SEAT IN CONGRESS

Present Incumbent Wins Out Over Gardner By A Majority Of 2033

ALL RETURNS ARE IN

Oliver W. Frey, Democratic candidate for Congress from the legislative district comprised of Bucks and Lehigh counties, won the election yesterday with a majority of 2033, according to returns completed this morning.

There are 104 election districts in both Bucks and Lehigh counties and all the returns had been completed and showed that the Democratic incumbent had been re-elected to office.

Both of the candidates are from Lehigh county. Gardner carried Bucks County by 1694 but lost Lehigh County by 3727 which gives Frey his majority.

The Gardner vote in Bucks County was 19,502 and in Lehigh County, 18,896.

The vote cast for Frey in Bucks County was 17,808 and in Lehigh County, 22,623.

BLINDED BY SUN SPOTS

TOKIO—(INS)—Katsue Misawa, a Japanese teacher, has lost the sight of his right eye as the result of making scientific observations of sun spots. His investigations had come to be regarded as important, but he has now been forced to give up the work.

KILLS SELF FOR LOVE

CARBONDALE, Ill.—(INS)—Fern Lambert, 17, shot and killed herself because her father refused to permit her marriage to Carl Cattonara, a coroner's jury decided. The couple pleaded for William Lambert's permission to their wedding. He refused. As Carl was leaving the Lambert home, the girl ran screaming into the house. A moment later there was a pistol shot. Her parents rushed in to find her dead.

Stole Bearings

Charged with the larceny of brass journal bearings from freight cars in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards at Morrisville, Carnivall Mosley, Negro, of Newark, N. J., pleaded guilty. He was sentenced by Judge Keller to pay a fine of $5 and costs and serve from one to three years in the Bucks County Prison.

Lieutenant Frank R. Sparling, of the railroad police, testified that 672 bearings valued at $1300 had been stolen from the Morrisville yards, and that the ring-leader of the gang was still at large. The defendant Mosley, Sparling testified, was caught going to the yards on his third trip.

Judge Keller, in passing sentence, said that he was of the opinion that Mosley was "a tool for the higher-ups" but that the Court could not allow him to go unpunished.

Petition Too Late

Because no emergency had been shown and there was not sufficient time to notify voters of the change of polling place, President Judge Hiram H. Keller, in a session of miscellaneous court, here, Monday afternoon, denied a motion, filed in the Court of Quarter Sessions, asking to change the polling place in Warrington township.

The motion, presented and signed by 25 electors of Warrington township asked that the polling place be changed from the first floor of the Warrington Fire House (old building) to the new fire house. The electors alleged that the old polling place was too crowded and named other inadequate features.

The motion, however, was not presented to President Judge Keller until nearly 4:45 o'clock. He denied the motion because of the "eleventh hour undertaking."

Richard W. Fechtenberg, Eddington real estate and insurance broker, charged with non-support, was directed by Judge Calvin S. Boyer, before whom the case was heard, to pay the costs of prosecution and the sum of $10 per week toward the support of his wife.

John Carr, of Bristol, who was convicted of assault and battery and served eight months in the County Prison, was granted a parole by President Judge Keller, who appointed Chief of Police Linford J. Jones, of Bristol, probation officer.

"You have been here so often it's a wonder you aren't tired of coming to

STOCKHAM HIGH IN MORRISVILLE VOTE

Leads His Nearest Opponent By A Majority Of 325 Votes

FOURTH WARD AGAINST

MORRISVILLE, Nov. 7.—Mayor Thomas B. Stockham, Republican candidate for the General Assembly, carried the borough with a plurality of 325 over his nearest opponent. He received 976 and his running mate, Wilson Yeakel, of Perkaskie, polled 912 votes. The Democratic candidates, Roger O. Mason, of Doylestown, received 644 votes, and John F. Smoyer, of Bristol, 651.

Democrats cast the heaviest vote in the history of the borough and for the first time carried the Fourth Ward, nominally a Republican ward. The entire vote cast in the borough was 1,688, very little splitting being done.

For State Senator, Clarence J. Buckman, of Langhorne, received 917 votes, while his Democratic opponent, C. William Freed, of Perkaskie, received 702. In the congressional race, Theodore A. Gardner, Republican, polled 926 votes, and Oliver W. Frey, Democrat, 655. Both are residents of Allentown.

William A. Schnader, Republican candidate for Governor, polled 942 votes, while George H. Earle received 688. For United States senator, David A. Reed, Republican, received 924 votes, while his opponent, Joseph Guffey, polled 790.

REPUBLICANS WIN IN DELAWARE

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 7.—The New Deal, the upsurge that deluged the nation as a whole in the election yesterday, failed to cross the borders of Delaware, virtually complete returns today revealed. With but one of the 226 election districts in this little state remaining to be accounted for, United States Senator John G. Townsend, one of the outstanding Republican critics of the Roosevelt administration, defeated his Democratic opponent, Wilbur L. Adams. The veteran senator pulled along with him to victory, the Republican nominee for the House of Representatives, John G. Stewart, who defeated the Democratic candidate, John C. Hazzard. In 225 of the state's 226 precincts, the vote stood: for Senator, Townsend, 52,426; Adams, 45,342; for Congressman Stewart, 51,904; Hazzard, 45,237.

STALWARTS DEFEATED

Harrisburg, Nov. 7.—Veteran Republican stalwarts fell by the wayside today as Democratic nominees, riding a New Deal tidal wave, gained a preponderant majority of 34 seats in Pennsylvania's congressional delegation for the first time in years, as a result of yesterday's balloting. The Democrats boosted their representative in the Keystone state delegation from 12 to 21, a gain of 9 and appeared to be slowly but surely winning at least two more congressional posts now held by the Republicans.

THREE STATES GO WET

Three more states—Florida, West Virginia and Wyoming—were added to the wet ranks today when their electorate repealed state prohibition laws or dry constitutional banks. In Kansas and Nebraska the wet drive appeared to have failed. Returns from Idaho and South Dakota where the same question was voted upon, were too incomplete to furnish final decisions.

SINCLAIR LOSES

San Francisco, Calif., Nov. 7.—The margin by which the voters of California rejected the candidacy of Upton Sinclair and his Utopian epic plan to "end poverty in California," grew today as total returns were tabulated. G. F. Merriam, Republican, was leading by 152,000 votes over the former Socialist, who captured the Democratic nomination, with 7101 precincts of the state's 19,721 tabulated. Indications were his plurality would be well over 200,000.

Seventeen Tables Filled At Fine Card Party Here

A successful card party was held last evening in the K. of C. Home, sponsored by Catholic Daughters. There were 17 tables of players enjoying games. Beautiful prizes were awarded. The highest scores of each game played were attained by:

"500"—Miss Gertrude Roche, 3510; Miss Katharine M. Dugan, 3389; Miss Elizabeth Cunningham, 3290; Miss Marie Roche, 3090; Miss Elizabeth Rishel, 2759.

Pinocle—Mrs. B. F. McGee, 822; Miss Helen Sugalski, 808; Miss Frances McFadden, 789; Mrs. H. Eastlack, 747; Mrs. Wilson, 739.

Bridge—Miss Veronica Dugan, 2218; E. Middleton, 2055; Miss Nan Brennan, 1920; Miss M. Dougherty, 1861; Mrs. E. Middleton, 1733.

Refreshments were served. Mrs. Anna Goshline was chairlady of the committee consisting of Mrs. Florence Gallagher, Mrs. Maude Gallagher, Mrs. Patrick Green, Mrs. E. Hearn, Mrs. M. Heath; Misses Anna Gallagher, Addie Gallagher, Alice Gallagher, Jennie Herry, Marie Gaffney.

HE CAN TAKE IT—SOMETIMES

(By "The Stroller")

A member of the St. Ann's football team, Anthony Niccoli, played the entire game against the Wissahickon Eagles last Sunday. He was pushed, shoved, kicked, and many times was spilled during the game on the turf. He was thankful that he escaped without a scratch, considering all the banging he got.

After the game, however, he attended a dance, and while attempting to do a "spot" dance slipped and fell with the result that today he is hobbling about with the aid of a cane.

Irony of fate, I would call it.

MORRISVILLE FIREMEN PLAN ANNIVERSARY

Capitol View Fire Company Was Organized 25 Years Ago

BUILT OWN STATION

MORRISVILLE, Nov. 7.—Observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Capitol View Fire Company will take place some time during the Winter, according to plans now being made by the organization. A history of the company is being compiled by George W. Duke, a former president and active member of the organization.

Capitol View Company was formed at the home of Mayor Thomas B. Stockham a quarter of a century ago by a small group of men from the upper end of the borough. Fred H. Ewald, a former member of Borough Council, was the first president, and Mayor Stockham the first secretary.

Following the organization of the company, Mayor Stockham presented to the firemen a six-cylinder, seven-passenger touring car, and two of the members, Cleveland and John Reed, built a body in which 1,000 feet of hose and later several ladders were hauled.

Later the company purchased from Charles A. Parsons, a former resident, another passenger automobile, and two chemical tanks were placed on the chassis. This served the company until one of the tanks blew up and it was found necessary to obtain modern apparatus.

Shortly after the organization of the company the firemen, by their own labor, erected a two-story frame fire house on a borough lot next to the old pumping station, and this served for years.

Today the company has a modern two-story brick fire house on North Penna. avenue and two modern pieces of apparatus. One of the machines is a pumper and the other is one of the latest booster pumping engines which are replacing chemical engines.

The company has a large and active membership and many of the men who were among the organizers have been active ever since.

Exchangeites Will Visit Bell Transmitting Station

Members of the local Exchange Club have completed plans for a trip tomorrow night to the American Telephone & Telegraph Company's trans-Atlantic transmitting station at Lawrenceville, N. J., club officials announced today.

Herman Schoenberger, who is in charge of the Lawrenceville radio telephone unit, will conduct the Exchange Club members through the station and then will explain to them how trans-Atlantic telephone calls are handled.

Three Philadelphia Men Hurt When Auto Hits Pole

Three Philadelphians were injured when their automobile struck a pole at Andalusia last evening at about 7:45. The driver, Peter Lee, 4814 Greenway avenue, Philadelphia, stated that the lights of an approaching car blinded him.

The trio was treated at Harriman Hospital.

(SEE TABLE ON PAGE SIX)

Bucks county emerged triumphant from the Democratic landslide yesterday which engulfed the state, while Bristol borough swung over into the Democratic column.

The vote was an exceedingly heavy one and the Republicans carried the county for all of their candidates on the ballot.

In Bucks County Senator Clarence J. Buckman, Langhorne, was re-elected to the State Senate while Wilson L. Yeakel, Perkaskie, was returned as a representative to the General Assembly.

Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville, was elected for the first time to sit in the general assembly.

In Bucks County the Buckman vote was 19,276 while that of the senator's opponent, C. William Freed, Quakertown, was 18,221, giving Senator Buckman a majority of 1055.

In the contest for the general assembly, Wilson L. Yeakel, Perkaskie, polled 19,674 votes and was re-elected to the assembly. Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville, who was elected to the office for the first time, received a total of 19,398 votes.

Roger O. Mason, Langhorne, and John F. Smoyer, Bristol, Democratic opponents of Yeakel and Stockham, were both defeated, Smoyer being the low man on the ticket. Mason polled 17,471 votes, Smoyer 17,393.

In Bristol Borough United States Senator David A. Reed was defeated by a majority of 381 for that office while William A. Schnader, Republican candidate for Governor, lost the contest to Earle in Bristol by a majority of 324.

Four of the ten voting districts in Bristol Borough remained in the Republican column while the other six districts gave Democratic majorities.

The voting districts in Bristol Borough giving Republican majorities to United States Senator and Governor were both precincts in the first ward, first precinct of the fifth ward, and the first precinct of the sixth ward.

The total vote polled in the 104 election districts in Bucks County for the various candidates, was as follows:

United States Senator: Reed, H., 19,760; Guffey, D., 17,551.

Governor: Schnader, R., 18,981; Earle, D., 17,578.

Lieutenant Governor: Scott, R., 19,618; Kennedy, D., 17,585.

Secretary of Internal Affairs: Taylor, R., 19,226; Logue, D., 17,138.

Judge of Superior Court: Trexler, R., 19,795; Rhodes, D., 17,196.

Representative in Congress: Gardner, R., 19,592; Frey, D., 17,808.

State Senator: Buckman, R., 19,276; Freed, D., 18,221.

General Assembly: Yeakel, R., 19,674; Stockham, R., 19,398; Mason, D., 17,471; Smoyer, D., 17,393.

ATTEND PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Moore, 327 Monroe street, attended a Halloween party, Saturday evening, given by members of Mrs. Moore's card club at the home of Mrs. Hood Simpson, Yeakel. Mr. and Mrs. Moore were overnight guests Saturday at Mrs. Simpson's home. Mrs. Robert Sullivan, Philadelphia, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Moore to Bristol on Sunday and spent the day.

TO FORM BAND

An opportunity will be given those who are musically inclined to join a proposed string band which is being organized under the supervision of Leon Cherubin, 562 Pond street.

Through the courtesy of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, the first meeting will be held in the Bracken Post home, Radcliff street, this evening, at eight o'clock. Those having instruments which include violins, mandolins, guitars, mandolas, banjos, ukuleles, saxophones, Hawaiian guitars, piano accordions, drums, are invited to become members of the organization. Men and women in Bristol and the surrounding country may join.

The object of Mr. Cherubin's proposition is to give the public a chance to form a permanent string band which would be an asset to Bristol as well as the county.

HOW TO START AN ARGUMENT

JUST READ THIS TO YOUR HUSBAND

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 7.—(INS)—Here are official figures for wives to spread before husbands who work an eight-hour day, 40-hour week, and come home complaining they are "tired business men."

The average housewife, in a week, spends 33 hours and 15 minutes, and walks an average of 10.6 miles, in doing nothing but preparing and serving the family meals, and washing the dishes afterward.

The statistics were obtained in an experiment study by Miss Marianne Muse, of the agricultural experiment station of the University of Vermont.

It was found that a woman averages 4 hours and 45 minutes and takes about 3,125 steps, in performing these tasks each day. With a little scientific readjustment, it was found that the time could be reduced to as low as 2 hours and 46 minutes, and the number of steps reduced to 1,024.

Miss Muse would also study the time and work incidental to other domestic tasks such as cleaning, mending, shopping, caring for children.

TWO-PARTY SYSTEM

As the federal government proceeds to revise the structure of our economic life, there is both inquiry into and opposition to the policies and practices at Washington. The result has been the appearance throughout the country of organizations and associations for and against the New Deal, and demands for a new political party.

Under our two-party system of government, however, the opposition has the responsibility of calling to public attention the full meaning of all actions of the party in power. By this system of checks and balances, coupled with the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and press, we have enjoyed a political stability that has allowed us to advance faster and further than any other nation on earth.

As divided political opposition invariably means relative support for the party being opposed, it follows that the Republican party is the normal agency of politically effective criticism of our present national administration policies. The two major parties have taken generations to develop their organizations and legal status. We are moving fast as a nation, and there is not time to organize a new political party which could adequately represent the principles of various groups not in full accord with the present course of our government.

If these various opposition groups want to be politically effective, there is nothing to prevent them from making the established Republican party into a medium for expressing their opposition to the present administration, for any political party is just what its supporters make it.

FIGURES

Thirteen-four per cent. of the people in South Dakota are on the relief rolls; in New Mexico 27 per cent. live on federal, state or local relief; in Florida 25 per cent. in Arizona 24 per cent. and in North Dakota and Utah, 21 per cent. In 120 others 20 per cent. are on relief. They are West Virginia and Minnesota. The remaining states of the 48 rank downward to 6 per cent. in New Hampshire and Vermont.

The figures are those of the United States News, a weekly published at Washington and occupied largely by government figures and statistics. Its comment upon them is, briefly, that "the biggest business in America is the administration of relief to the needy."

It is a striking commentary on the state of the nation, a strong contradiction of the vaunted "recovery" that seems forever coming. In it is invitation to heed the claims here in our own state of those who would substitute, for the artificial structure of relief, a valid recovery based upon the gain of industry and business, and would shape our laws to aid them.

It might help some to quit calling these gun-toting kids "bad men" and entice them to a public spanking.

Now that the cop has a bullet-proof vest, all he needs is some way to rivot it on so that handits can't steal it.

Mrs. Horace Mitchell, Chalfont, spent Tuesday with Mrs. Raymond Woolson.

Mrs. William Beizer, Sr., spent Tuesday in Philadelphia.

Is This Too Good for Your Cough?

Creomulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines seven helps in one. It is made for quick relief, for safety.

Mild coughs often yield to lesser helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people, more and more, are using Creomulsion for any cough that starts.

The cost is a little more than a single help. But your druggist is authorized to guarantee it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are danger signals. For safety's sake, deal with them in the best way known.—(Advertisement)

GIRL IN THE FAMILY

BY BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XXXVII

She did not let the Cullens know when she was away, and she had written to John only a week before and sent him her address.

Soon she had a letter from him. "Aunt Nell's written me twice to ask where you are," he wrote. "She wants to know whether you've gone down south with the aunts, and wonders why you didn't go to say good-bye to her. Better go to see her right away, Susie. Why don't you come out here to Connie and me? I might be able to get you some sort of place on the paper. There are women in the editorial department, on the woman's page, and downstairs in the business office. If you think you'd like to come out I'll send you the railroad fare." There was more of the letter, all of it encouraging, but Susan shook her head over it.

"No, she's going to stand on her own feet, she told herself for the thousandth time. She had done nothing that was right in her life so far, as she saw it, through her own weakness, and from now on she was determined to take no help from anyone and ask for no advice. She felt somehow that the success or failure of the rest of her life depended on what she did now and how she stood up under her present unhappiness.

For she was extremely unhappy these days, as well as discouraged. She hated Anna's clean little house with its mingled smells of boiling cabbage and stew meat, of yellow kitchen soap and the tar tonic that Herbert used on his mouse-colored hair. The stench from the nearby stockyards filled her with nausea and she felt certain that her lungs must be jet black with the soot that she took in with every breath. Every night she was roused from sleep, time after time, by the sound of the dry hacking cough of old Mrs. Herbert who had chronic bronchitis. Shortly after midnight the clatter of milk bottles began to sound from the back yard where Herbert and Joe were loading their trucks. The motors would bang and the garage doors would bang and they would drive away, one behind the other. Then at six o'clock the sounds of the day began—the opening of Anna's bedroom door that was the signal for Susan to get up, the gurgling of water in the bathroom pipes, the ringing of an alarm clock somewhere in the neighborhood, the six o'clock bells of St. Theodosius' Russian Orthodox church, the shrieking of factory whistles.

On Sunday afternoons the little house was always filled with people, friends and relatives of the Herberts who laughed and talked and drank home-made beer in Anna's brightly upholstered living room.

Susan always took refuge in her own room on these occasions, mending her clothes, doing her nails, reading or just lying across the bed resting. She was tired most of the time lately. The work of the house was not very heavy and Anna did more than half of it. But there were the milk cans to be washed out with boiling water and soda every morning when the two brothers brought them home empty, and there were hundreds of bottles to be sterilized and filled and capped with the capping machine that Susan soon learned how to use. She helped with this work every day, taking the place of Elva who had died a few years before.

However, it wasn't the heavy work that bothered Susan. The thing that wore her out was the very over the job that she could not find, the knowledge that her money was going, and the feeling of defeat that came over her at the end of every day's fruitless search for work.

Sometimes in the morning when the sun came shining through the smoke that lay like a pall over the whole South Side she would feel hope and energy surge up within her. Surely she ought to be able to manage so small a thing as her own life when the milk cans and the world mended itself so easily and beautifully from sun up to dark, year after year, century after century!

That feeling of high hope and self-reliance would slowly dwindle as the day wore away and she went from this place to that looking for work and not finding it.

One morning Hart's department store advertised that it was in need of an elevator starter and that it wanted a young woman "of neat appearance" for the place. Months before Susan had promised herself that she would never step inside Hart's again, but she set out now without even remembering her vow. By the time she had taken the forty-minute street car ride to the heart of the city the employment office was crowded with girls who had come in answer to the advertisement, a middle-aged woman with gray hair, was just telling them that she had picked a girl for the place.

As she turned to go back into her office Susan pushed her way through the crowd and stepped up to her. "Is there any other opening in the store?" she asked quickly. "Anywhere?—Even down in the bargain basement?"

The woman shook her head and began to close the door. "Isn't a thing," she said. "We're cutting down in every department, turning off some of our best and most experienced people every week."

Experience. Training. Those were the two things that every employer seemed to insist upon. Susan was more down-hearted than usual as she went back to Anna's in time to set the table with the thick white china and the bone-handled knives and forks for dinner.

How did other untrained, inexperienced people like herself make a living, she wondered that afternoon as she worked in the creamery, taking Anna's place behind the counter for an hour. The women of the neighborhood came in, asked for a pound of cheese or a quart of milk and laid their money down upon the clean white counter. Susan looked at it from a point of view that was new to her. . . . Somebody had had to find a job in order to earn that money. Everybody, everybody but herself, seemed to know how to go about getting work and the wages that went with work.

What quality did the people who earned money have that she apparently did not have?

"Times is hard," she heard Herbert remark one night to Anna as he read his German paper, the "Wachter und Anzeiger." "Lots of people out of work. We should think ourselves lucky."

"But I ought to find something, anyhow," thought Susan. "I have a good head and I'm just as good looking as a great many people. Neat looking, at any rate."

She thought about herself a great deal more than was good for her, lying in her hard bed staring out at the steady scene stars that seemed to be asking what the fret and trouble was about.

Looking back, she saw that for almost twenty-two years she had been a good obedient child, moving this way and that at the bidding of the family. When she had wanted to be trained to be a paid worker they had behaved as if it were a disgrace to want to be a working girl instead of a "marriage girl" who was to marry the man she wanted but the man they wanted her to marry. And then, when she had given up Allen because of them, they had gone their own way, leaving her utterly unprepared to face the world. They had left her high and dry.

She remembered what John had told her on Christmas night at the Cullens'. "You'll have to grow up some time, you know, Susan." Well, she had had to grow up almost overnight, to learn to stand alone, to walk alone, at last.

On a Monday morning of wind and sunshine, Susan went to Mills Road to see her Aunt Nell Cullen. After the grime and ugliness of Clay Street, Mills Road was the most beautiful and cheerful spot on earth to Susan. The snow had been washed away by a rain the night before and every puddle was as blue as a little lake, reflecting a cloudless sky.

Susan had decided to go to the Cullens' early in the day when there would be very little chance of seeing either Allen or Mary, and it was just ten o'clock when she stepped from the car at the corner of the street.

Aunt Nell, in galoshes and a leather windbreaker, O. Howard's, was in the side yard beating a row of bed pillows that were pinned in a row on the clothes line.

Her galoshes flapped around her ankles and her apron puffed out like a sail in the wind as she came hurrying across the flattened wet grass to Susan. "Well, Susan! Susan Broderick! Where have you been? And why didn't you let us know where you were?—Why did you do this dreadful thing to us?" Her features were all puckered in the middle of her rosy face by her distress. "We have worried and worried and worried!"

"I'm staying at Anna's," said Susan with her aunt's arms around her, holding her tightly. "Anna, our old maid, you know. She married Herbert, our milkman. I'm boarding at her house." She spoke in a perfectly matter-of-fact way as if it were the most natural thing in the world that she should hide herself from the Cullens and go to live in Clay Street with Anna.

Her aunt did not answer her, and her puzzled eyes went on searching Susan's face as she led the way in to the house and made her a cup of cocoa. The house with its white painted book shelves, and its sun shine and its Boston ferns in the window, was more like home to Susan than the house on Center Street ever had been. There was a certain welcome, a feeling of homecoming, in the very smell of the place—the smell of cleanliness and pine pillows and savory cooking that was as much a part of the house as the big Oriental living room rug that it had taken Aunt Nell two years to pay for on the installment plan.

"We didn't know you'd all left the house until Mary tried to call you up and found that the telephone had been disconnected," Aunt Nell said when she had made the cocoa in a blue-flowered cup that reminded Susan of the "dunking" party. "We waited for a day or two, thinking you'd come over to see us, and when you didn't, I got Howard to drive me over to Center Street. And I simply couldn't believe my eyes when I saw the house standing there empty and a great big 'For Sale' sign on the front of it! I went straight home and wrote to John to find out what had happened and where you were—and last week he wrote to tell me that he'd written you and that you'd be coming to see me soon. Susan, what did you do a thing like this for?"

"I came to see you one night but no one was at home. Didn't Mr. Jennings tell you that I stopped in at the store?" asked Susan.

"Yes, but why didn't you come again? Or why didn't you call us up when you knew your own telephone was disconnected and we couldn't get you?" pursued her aunt. "I don't understand all this, Susan. You must have had some good reason for staying away. You weren't angry with us over anything, were you, or hurt?—You must know how much we all think of you."

"I thought I wouldn't let anyone know where I was until I was all straightened around," murmured Susan, telling a half truth, and knowing that she could never explain things to Aunt Nell's satisfaction unless she told her about herself and Allen Sholes. And that she told herself, was the one thing she would never do.

"Well, now that you're here, we'd better make some plans for your staying here," her aunt said briskly, her face clearing a little. "I'm never going to let you stay at your hired girl's house, now that I know you're here. Allen Sholes has been staying with us. He has Connie's room but I'll explain how things are to him and he'll give it up."

"He and Mary have struck up such a nice friendship," she added. "We all think so much of her, he's just like one of the family already. I think I may be able to get him a room back here on Edwards Street with a Mrs. Taylor who rents rooms—and then he can go right on taking his meals here with us."

"No, I'm not coming here," Susan answered with such force that Aunt Nell pushed her glasses up above her eyebrows to look more closely at her. She always said that she had to take off her glasses when she wanted to see what was really going on. "I'm all settled at Anna's and I think I'd better stay there."

HOLLYWOOD.—It's so simple and think the movies would have been made before.

Director Chuck Reisner has been working for days about the time he must have working with a year-old baby in

the "Winning Ticket."

Under the Call-form law, an inan agent before the camera

only two hours a day. Added to the normal difficulty of getting children to do a scene, correctly,

this often means that a week is spent on a small sequence.

Then "Chuck happened to drop in on the "Dixie Copperfield" set one day. There he found Benny and Bobby Ponder, a pair of year-old twins, making their motion picture debut.

A light dawned upon Reisner. He rushed to the production office, where, inside of an hour, Chuck's idea became fact.

The "Comed" twins, identical in appearance, will play a single role in

"The Winning Ticket." And, instead of two hours a day, Chuck will now work four.

Just as the cameras were nearly ready to grind, the Max Baer picture, "Kids on the Couch," has been postponed and the story goes back to the scenario department for extended revision, or perhaps to be abandoned entirely. According to

Leo Morrison, Max's diminutive

agent, the champ has given Paramount a 60-day extension, and 30 more if they need it, on the starting

Mrs. Wallace Deary is not exactly enough to depend upon her nurse, but she is preparing to write a book all about Carol Ann Deary and the youngster's life with her adopted parents. Wallace's love for Carol Ann is one of the film colony's favorite topics of conversation. The hard-boiled star could not be any more devoted to her if she was his

Founded by Samuel B. Ardrey in October, 1884, we, the son and grandson, are proud to announce that this business is being conducted today on the same principle of service and integrity that characterized the founder. During these years we have kept in step with the rapid advancement of improved heating and engineering methods. Our firm installed the first hot water heating plant in Bristol at the late William H. Hay's property, 242 Mill Street, and also the first unit heating system in the State of Pennsylvania at the Newtown Public School, Newtown. The first oil burner in Bristol was installed by us in the residence of William G. Buckman, 933 Radcliffe Street. We were also first to adopt cast iron brazing and welding in this vicinity. We are proud of our record through these 50 years. We hope to continue to serve the people of this section with the same efficiency in the future as we have in the past, and extend our heartfelt appreciation to the customers who have made this record possible.

Court. "Can't you stop drinking?" Judge Keller asked the big, brawny Irishman.

"I wasn't drunk, they only thought I was," muttered Carr as he left the courtroom.

Carr was required to pay the costs of prosecution which amounted to $52.15.

Two youths, Norman Myers, of Dublin, and George Simola, of Springfield township, were granted paroles by Judge Keller. To Myers, who served 14 months for a charge of felonious entry and larceny, and was involved in a series of thefts in middle Bucks county, Judge Keller said: "There is no reason in the world why you should have come back. I know your father, and you have a wonderful background. Your relatives have come to see me and still have faith in you."

Myers was directed to pay the costs of prosecution at the rate of $10 per month.

Serving his minimum term in the County Prison, Strubia, charged with felonious entry and larceny, was granted a parole.

Charged with operating a car while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, Theodore Chilcott, of Philadelphia, Centre county, was granted a parole by Judge Keller on the condition that he pay the costs of prosecution and live in installments of $10 per month.

A Langhorne youth, Elmer LeFevre, charged with operating a car while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and who was fined $200 and costs, was granted a parole on the condition that he pay the costs at the rate of $2 per week.

For contempt of a court order, Edwin V. Hellyer, of Wilkes-Barre, was committed to the County Prison by Judge Keller. Mrs. Hellyer, wife of the defendant, testified that he was in the arrears $902. He had been ordered to pay $7 a week for the support of his wife and a daughter, Olga, 17, of New Hope.

Hellyer, a commercial photographer, explained to the court he was not earning enough to support his wife and daughter.

In an action of habeas corpus, filed in the Court of Common Pleas, Stephen Carver, 57, was discharged from the custody and restraint of Charles O. Hartman, a Phareville farmer.

The action was brought by two brothers, Levi Carver and Willett Carver. Mrs. Margaret Terrell, of Newtown, testified that she "looked after Stephen Carver like a mother, paid his insurance and bought him clothing because he has been in their employ for more than 30 years. He asked me to get him another place to work numerous times when I visited him."

Carver will enter the employ of Deputy Clerk of Quarter Session

Joseph C. Slack, of Penns Park. The plaintiffs indicated their brother would have better care.

After District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn made a motion for nol pros in the case of J. Harvey Haney, of Ottsville, charged with arson, Judge Calvin S. Boyer discharged the defendant.

Haney was recently discharged from Fairview, where he underwent treatment for four years.

CHURCHVILLE

J. M. Rhoads, Southampton, entertained the Churchville Ladies Club at their regular monthly meeting at her home on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Helen Wilson will give a public card party at her home on Wednesday evening, November 14th, for the benefit of the Senior Class of the Richboro High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thoman and son Wesley, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Yentzer, Somerset, on Saturday evening.

GORGEOUS AMARYLLIS SURE TO GROW

The old-time Johnson amaryllis was a favorite house plant for generations, its clusters of big velvety crimson trumpets being a sure-fire winter attraction. We now have amaryllis of this type, double the size of the old Amaryllis Johnsoni and in a great variety of colors from white through pinks to scarlet and deep crimson and some with handsome stripes. These new hybrids are certain bloomers. All they need is to be planted and set in the window and they will send up their stout stems crowned with a cluster of huge blooms. The bulbs are large and need a large pot of at least 7-inch size, the bulb being covered so that the neck protrudes from the soil.

When potted set them up in a sunny window and water just to moisten the soil until the bud starts pushing out of the bulb. In order to get long stems, some growers keep them in the dark until the stem is four or five inches tall before bringing into full light. After flowering the leaves, which are long, broad and dark green, develop and are ornamental. They should be kept in growth after flowering and given plenty of moisture until the following July or August when they should be given a resting period, letting them become dry. In the fall they will start new growth and will develop their stems in winter again. It is no trouble at all to have fine amaryllis blooms in the ordinary living room.

The old Johnsoni is still one of the fine ones and can be had at all dealers. Another old-timer of shorter growth both as to flower stem and foliage is Amaryllis Equestris, an orange scarlet, one of the most generous of the whole amaryllis list in blooming, often throwing up two or three stems. Plant a few amaryllis for gorgeous window display this winter.

The so-called magic lily that often astonishes those not familiar with it by shooting up a tall stem in late summer crowned with pink lilies is also an amaryllis and a hardy bulb to be planted now. This is Amaryllis Halli and also known as Lycoris squamigera. It makes its foliage in spring and then dies down and disappears. In August and early September, the flower stem appears suddenly from the bare ground, grows rapidly and unfolds its handsome lilies. The crown of the bulb should be about four inches below the surface of the soil and it should be given a good mulch the first season. It is perfectly hardy and never fails to attract admiration and astonishment.

Sweep Democrats Into Office in Keystone State

House of Representatives today, at the same time destroying the two-thirds Republican majority in the State Senate.

Neither accomplishment has been duplicated by the Democratic party in Pennsylvania since the turn of the century.

Boostered by an unanimous Democratic delegation to the General Assembly from Allegheny County, on the basis of nearly complete returns from yesterday's election, the heretofore minority element in the House was practically certain to exceed the Constitutional majority of 105.

The Democratic membership in the Senate, now seven, likely will be increased at the next session to beyond the present estimated minimum of 17.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7 — (INS) — Their Republican opposition battered away by the New Deal tidal wave in yesterday's balloting, Democrats today stepped into complete control of Pennsylvania's Congressional delegation for the first time in a political age.

The Democrats increased their representation from 12 to 29 of the 34 members and were expected to win three additional seats as the day wore on.

The traditional solid 100 per cent. Republican representation of seven was shattered in Philadelphia and three Democratic candidates were swept into office as Congressmen while four G. O. P. nominees achieved

Constipation Leads To Forty Ailments Declares Authority

Sick Headaches, Painful Bloating Feeling in Lower Stomach and Rheumatic Affliction Arise from Clogged Intestinal Tract

Science Introduces New Medicine That Works With the Food We Eat, Called Indo-Vin; Costs Only Few Cents Daily

A new mixture of medicinal ingredients has been found which has a natural action upon the bowels and stomach. It is not a cure-all, not a "patent" medicine, but a scientific formula that works with the sufferer's own food, known as Indo-Vin, now being introduced here in Bristol at the Victor Cut Rate store, and by every leading drug store in this whole section.

Several prominent Bristol residents were among the first to purchase this medicine and actual reports prove it has helped 87 percent of those who have taken it. Yesterday a well-known medical authority stated that forty of mankind's serious ailments were directly traceable to constipation and that city drinking water often helps lead to this common affliction. Many Bristol people who have taken Indo-Vin say it is the first medicine that really relieved constipation and produced natural bowel action.

G. H. Mosby, The originator of Indo-Vin

What Indo-Vin Is

It is the world's newest medicine, containing a combination of ingredients found in no other known formula. These ingredients mix with the food in one's stomach, thus throwing off the poisons that foster stomach troubles and permitting the liver and bowels to function properly. It will cleanse your bowels (gradually—not drastic or severe) as they were never cleansed before and tone them into better daily action.

It will bring out awful gases and impurities (frequently from the first dose) which may have been inside you for a long time, contaminating your blood and inner-organs, spreading this poison

Much Leisure Time Spent In Reading of Newspapers

The survey, recognized officially by the Department of Commerce, was based upon reports from 5,000 individuals, 71 per cent of whom are employed all or part time. It was designed to show what Americans are doing with their leisure time in the wake of shortening of hours of labor, changing conditions and even in the absence of employment.

Reading of newspapers and magazines ranked first in the list of spare time activities reported. Out of 5,000 replies, there were 1,216 who said that they devoted more time in 1933 than in 1932 to reading of periodicals.

Other activities listed in order are: listening to the radio, attending movies, visiting or entertaining others, reading fiction, automobile riding for pleasure, swimming, writing letters, reading non-fiction books and conversation.

In the increase of activity over the year previous, however, the reading of non-fiction books followed newspapers, magazines and the radio. Apparently many more individuals, their interest aroused by the "New Deal" and general discussion of economic theories, have turned to books for aid in understanding the trend of American life.

The survey showed that one out of every four persons reporting sold that they had increased their reading of newspapers and magazines, while one out of five had increased their radio time.

Playing bridge also loomed large in the recreational activities of those reporting. On the whole the increase in activities centered largely in the home, indicating that more of the leisure time made available by the new order is being spent at home.
